

Where to Eat Now: Power-Ranking New L.A. Restaurants, 3/27

March 27, 2015

Garrett Snyder

Each Friday, the Digest surveys the burgeoning L.A. restaurant scene and compiles this (highly unscientific) list of the most hyped and heralded restaurants in town this instant. Whether old or new, big or small, near or far, these are the restaurants that have people talking. Whatever that means. Anyway, we recommend getting a seat at these places while you still can.

3. Bettolino Kitchen: Modern Italian cooking is the name of the game at this South Bay project helmed by Italian chef Fabio Ugoletti, who has a Michelin star under his belt. Redondo Beach fans can now enjoy handmade pastas, pistachio-crusting halibut, and braised veal cheeks in a rustic beach-adjacent space.
